

The Traditional Symbol of the "Winged Horse" as a Source for the Formation of Contemporary Poster Imagery.

Student: LiaoYuxuan

Research question

How can one historical motif become a contemporary poster system?

The silhouette preserves recognition.
Ornament, colour and layout create new interpretations.

Immediate visual source

Liao horse harness ornament

The supplied attribution identifies gilded bronze horse harness fittings.

The Liao tomb is at Shazigou, Aohan Banner.
Excavations took place in 1982 and 1983.

The attribution follows the supplied material.
The blue reproduction does not establish the metal colour.

Historical comparisons

Historical studies

Studies compare origins, motif types and materials.

Pearl roundels inform the Exchange interpretation.

Design studies

Design studies support element extraction.

Cloud curves inform Localisation.

The literature supplies comparisons and methods.
The Liao harness image supplies the selected form.

Formal features of the source

—辽代鎏金铜器-翼马纹—

The elongated body creates direction.
The wings extend the movement.
Curled joints organise the centre.
Gaps keep the limbs distinct.

I mirrored the source to face right.
The change supports the poster layout.

04 Reimagination

The shares guide design decisions. Actual poster areas and supporting colours vary.

Vertical poster series

One template connects four graphic interpretations.

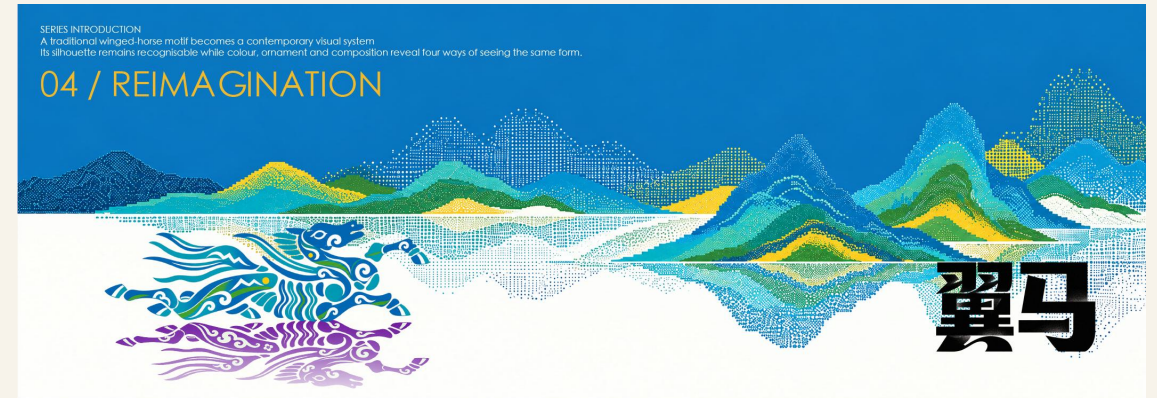

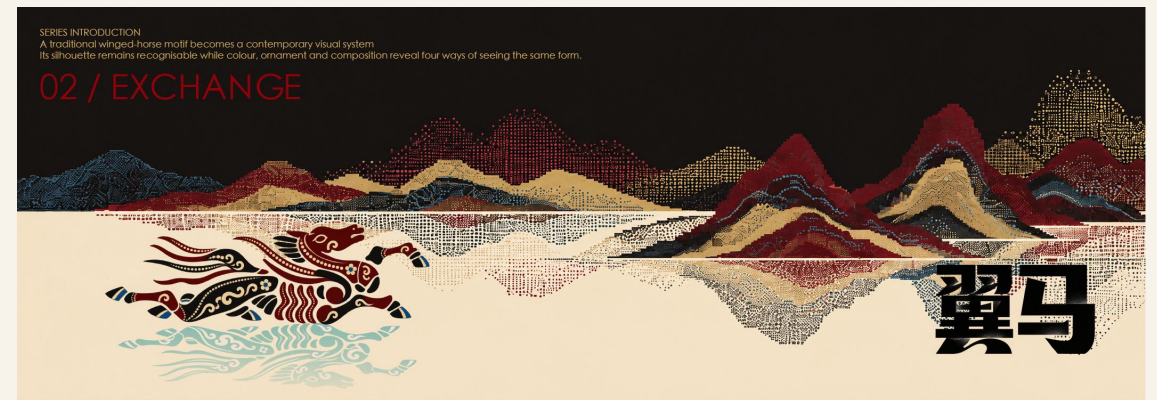

Vertical composition

Large Chinese characters frame the diagonal horse.

The overlap creates layers and movement.
Dense strokes can obscure the horse.
The grain is a modern graphic effect.

Panoramic poster series

Format comparison and production

The wide layout supports motion. Small text and enlargement need further checks.
